

Wrong Guy Twice

Written and Composed By: Anthony Holloway

Verse

You showed up halfway through the night
Said he's a good man, but it don't feel right
Somehow time, it made it more clear
That I was the one you wanted near

Pre-Chorus

I knew better than letting this start
Still you know your way to my heart

Chorus

You always said you picked the wrong guy
But I see the truth looking in your eyes
Tell me why we're doing this tonight
Deep down something says this ain't right
Even though in your arms feels like paradise
What's to stop you making me the wrong guy twice

Verse

Your auburn hair laid on my chest
Talking 'bout how you second guess
The way my name still rolled off your lips
Girl one soft kiss turned into this

Pre-Chorus

Knew it was over when your dress hit the floor
Didn't say a word, it turned into more

Chorus

Girl I swear this feels too good to lie
This kind of love I just can't justify
Maybe there's a reason we're here tonight
But that kind of thinking just ain't right
Even though in your arms feels like paradise
What's to stop you making me the wrong guy twice

Bridge

Somewhere there's a porch light still on
And a man wondering where you've gone
And I hate that I don't hate this right now
'Cause that says too much about us somehow

Chorus

In the morning light it's black and white
What we did was wrong but it felt so right
Still I know why we're back here tonight
Knowing damn well I'm gonna lose the fight
Even though in your arms feels like paradise
I'm already just the wrong guy... twice

Outro
