

Yes, No, Maybe So

Written and Composed By: Anthony Holloway

Verse

She's there on my left, your smile on my right,
You leaned over like you owned that night.
You said, "Can I buy you another drink?"
I smirked and asked, "What do you think?"

Pre-Chorus

You slid two shots over with a cocky grin,
Like you knew how much trouble I'd let in.

Chorus

My girl gives me that "not again" stare,
You raise your glass like you don't even care.
She's sizing you up, I'm seeing through lies,
Searching for truth in the look in your eyes.
You ask if maybe we should give this a go—
— Yes, no, maybe so.

Verse

Later that night after three or four beers,
And somehow you're the one still sitting here.
She's checking her phone, but I'm locked on you,
Seeing a different side come through.

Pre-Chorus

You leaned in closer, I didn't turn away,
I wasn't sold, but I still let you stay.

Chorus

My girl rolls her eyes at your best line,
I laugh, say, "Relax, we're just killing time."
You lay it on thick, I lower my guard,
Still making you work, but not quite as hard.
You ask me again, "Should we give this a go?"
— Yes, no, maybe so.

Bridge

Then she grabs my arm, says, "Let's call it a night,"
So done with your charm and me putting up a fight.
You don't even blink, you just hold my stare,
Waiting to see if I'll meet you out there.

Chorus

My girl says, "Come on, it's time to leave,"
You hand me your number, say, "I still believe."
I save it, then turn and head for the door,
I smile and look back, leave you wanting more.
You ask if I'll call, but I don't let you know—
— Yes, no, maybe so.

Outro

You never know...
[Soft playful laugh]
Maybe so.